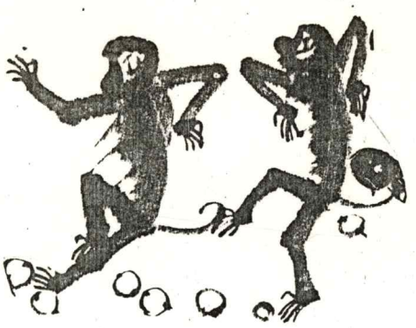
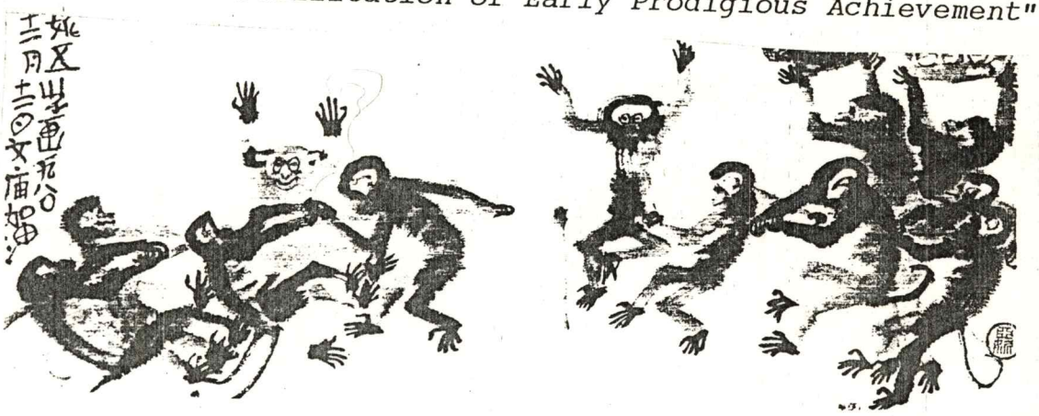
ART EDUCATION COLLOQUIUM SERIES 1990-91

The Art Education Colloquium Series is pleased to announce the last two talks in this year's series.

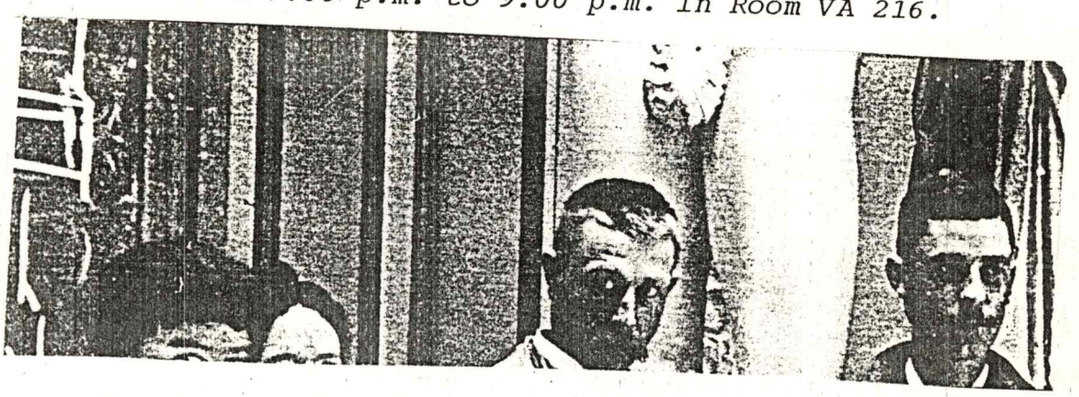
On Monday, March 18th from 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. in room VA 215, Dr. Lynn Goldsmith, a cognitive psychologist, will be talking about the work of a gifted Chinese child: Wang Yani. We will see slides of Yani's work and watch part of a video tape in which Yani demonstrates her painting technique.



Dr. Goldsmith is the co-author, with David Feldman, of Nature's Gambit: Child Prodigies and the Development of Human Potential, and numerous articles, among them "Girl Prodigies: Some Evidence and Some Speculations" and "The Timing of Talent: The Facilitation of Early Prodigious Achievement".



On Monday, April 15th, Dr. Terry Barrett of the Ohio State University will talk about his long-standing research on the interpretation of photographs, with a particular emphasis on its implications for art education. Dr. Barrett will give his talk from 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. in Room VA 216.



Dr. Barrett is the author of the book, Criticizing Photographs: An Introduction to Understanding Images, and numerous articles, among them: "Some High School Students, A Teacher, A Professor and Robert Mapplethorpe's The Perfect Moment"; "Teaching about Photography: Types of Photographs"; "Photographs and Contexts", and "Photographs, Credibility and Ideology".

ALL INTERESTED/AND INTERESTING/PEOPLE ARE INVITED TO ATTEND.
